

Moses receiving the Ten Commandments
Moses receiving the Ten Commandments, with his brother, Aaron, standing to his right and Israelites waiting at the foot of the mountain, miniature illuminated manuscript, c. 1322.

The Israelites were afraid to speak to God directly and found the freedom of God's law through his prophet Moses. He promised that the Father would send someone to lead from among them. Jesus, the word made flesh, lives among us, presents our needs to God, and always speaks through the Scriptures, the Church, but most especially through every human heart. Give him your undivided attention by studying the scripture readings before mass starts to better contemplate the message. Pick up the missalettes before mass and read them through. Go back and read them again. Then listen. "Do not be afraid to open your hearts to Christ," St. JPill would say, and listening carefully, put his word into action in your life, your family, and your parish.
